Thomas,

Wonderful, so glad to hear it!

I'm in South Carolina this summer and have been travelling this week. 2PM CST on Thursday via Zoom would be great!

Hi Josh,

Thanks for reaching out and thinking of me! This would also be my first chance to be involved in a project like this and I'd love to contribute any way that I can. Here's my availability this week:

Tuesday: 7:30am - 1:00pm, 2:30pm - 5pm

Wednesday: 7:30am - 10:00am, 12:00pm - 2:00pm

Thursday: 7:30am - 2:30pm

I'm happy to meet via Zoom or at the library/your offices if you're on campus.

Looking forward to chatting soon,

Thomas

Mr. Jonte,

I am reaching out because my colleagues and I are in the process of starting a systematic review and would like to include a librarian with a strong background in mathematics/statistics and data analysis in our study. This is our first foray into systematic reviews, and there is evidence in the literature that suggests including a librarian increases the quality of the review and subsequent chances of successful publication (<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC8406371/>). We would love to discuss your potential inclusion as a reviewer or co-author (depending on your availability) sometime next week through Zoom if you are interested.

We presented our topic at the 2024 Conference on Statistical Practice (CSP) and won the best poster award, which was accompanied by a special invitation to submit to their journal, the Journal of Statistical Theory and Practice (JSTP). Our submission deadline is 30JUL2024. Here is our abstract and poster, let us know if you are interested in this!

Best,
